

DENHARDT SUES HIS "ENEMIES"

Counters Accusation He Was Responsible in Death of "Party Girl."

By The Associated Press
BOWLING GREEN, Ky., July 22.—(P)—Henry H. Denhardt, whose political and military career in Kentucky has been stormy, charged today in a $150,000 damage suit his enemies were seeking to imprison and "destroy him financially, politically and socially."

The suit, on file in circuit court here, was a counter action to a suit for $15,000 damages preferred earlier this month in Louisville against Denhardt of responsibility in the death of pretty Patricia Wilson, whom police there described as a "party girl."

The 61-year-old Denhardt, former lieutenant governor and assistant general of Kentucky, is awaiting trial next fall on a charge he slew his fiancée, Mrs. Clara Carr Taylor. The jury disagreed at his first trial in New Castle last spring. Named as defendants in the general suit were Edward C. Langan, public administrator of Jefferson county (Louisville), his surety, James T. Robinson, attorney, and other unnamed defendants.

Langan filed the civil suit against Denhardt contending he beat and assaulted Mrs. Wilson, whose broken body was found in an elevator shaft in a Louisville hotel (Seelbach) July 15, 1934.

A coroner's jury found the girl met death "through her own carelessness."

Denhardt denied he was in Louisville or the hotel at the time of Mrs. Wilson's death. He also reiterated his contention Mrs. Taylor died by her own hand.

The general alleged Langan's suit was "deliberately and maliciously filed" that it libels him, seeks to deprive him of his military rank.

150 ATTEND PICNIC OF FOOD DEALERS

Business Men, Employees and Families Hold Outing at Sugar Grove Lake.

More than 150 grocersmen, clerks, other food distributors and their families took the afternoon off yesterday and went on a picnic—the first Marion grocers' outing in several years. The affair was sponsored by the Marion Food Distributors' association, but all the grocers in the city, regardless of membership in the association were invited.

The picnic was held at Sugar Grove lake with each party bringing its basket. A softball game between Kroger employees and independent grocersmen went 15 innings with no score being kept. Boating, swimming and games featured the day. F. R. McDaniel, president of the association, and Carl Campbell, secretary, were in charge of arrangements.

Those attending met at 2:30 yesterday afternoon at Kruer's grocery on North Main street and proceeded to the lake in a body. The picnic ended about 6 p. m.

Plans were made for an important meeting in the middle of August when all food distributors of the city—meat dealers, grocers, wholesalers—will be invited to discuss citywide proposals. The nature of the contemplated actions was not disclosed by officials of the association.

Everyone in Marion with a hobby collection, articles of historical value or unusual interest, and relics of any kind are invited to join in the fourth annual Hobby and Homecoming Week Aug. 23-27, sponsored by the Marion Hobby club.

The invitation to exhibit the collections and articles was issued publicly today following a meeting of the club last night at the Y. M. C. A.

It is the aim of his committee he said, to have a display in every uptown window. The displays will remain in the windows through Sunday, Aug. 29, although the week's activities will close on Friday night.

Marion's 3 Supervised Playgrounds Fill Real Need Among City's Children

By HALLIE HUCK
Marion's playgrounds at McKinley and Lincoln parks and the Marion Steam Shovel Co. grounds are meeting a real need among Marion children, those in charge and parents of boys and girls have found.

Children off the streets during the long summer days, their play supervised, the quality of good sportsmanship and the ability to mingle socially with other children being stressed, are much better boys and girls than children permitted to "run wild" in vacant months, experience has shown and proved.

Daily except Saturday from 9 to 11:30 a. m. and from 1 to 3 p. m., the Y. M. C. A., in cooperation with the National Youth Administration, provides attractive programs at the three playgrounds. The three weeks the playgrounds have been open the daily attendance has increased to an average of 150 at McKinley, nearly 200 at Lincoln, and 242 at the Shovel Co. ground.

Program Is Varied
McKinley park offers volleyball, basketball, croquet, axing, exercise bars, sandpile, tennis and a merry-go-round, and virtually the same equipment is at Lincoln. At the Shovel Co. playground there is no equipment, but there are two courts for volleyball, a large sandpile and two ball diamonds. The courts and sandpile are on a large sandy lot about a half-block from the ball diamonds.

Handicraft and games are interspersed with rest periods throughout the day. The summer handicraft projects, some of which have not yet been taught, include weaving, crocheting, and shellacking the finished projects. Novelty items, coloring, drawing, wood tapping which is an attractive way of finishing a wood, drawing, color spraying, scrapbooks, sewing, bead work, tracing, soap carving and wood burning.

Boys wax enthusiastic over the Huck Finn ball leagues, junior and senior for football players and senior for baseball. Each park has its various teams, and periodically the best players from the various teams are selected to represent their playground in inter-playground games. Boys and girls who register with leaders become members of the Knott Hole Gang and are entitled free to the Marion baseball league team home games.

Safety precautions are enforced. Children are not permitted to stand in the wagon, two children "pumping" a swing, two children at the top of a slide board at the same time, and sand throwing are banned.

Each week the boy and girl with the most notable record at each playground is given a pass to the Ohio theater by J. J. Huebner, manager.

Plenty of Entertainment
Forty-four different games have been worked up by the supervisors to give the boys and girls a variety of entertainment. Among these are "relax jack", "acquired in trees", "Charlie over the water", "Jitsu and Javob", "shuttle relay", "hoop tag", "black Tom", "blinch", "circle dodge ball", "three deep", "poison", "jump the clock", "hat couple out", "Japanese tag", "flying Dutchman", "pursuit race", "flying relay", "pass faster", "over and under relay", "scrambled anatomy", "sleeping stones" and "sit, water, fire".

Among the highly organized, or standard games are volleyball, basketball, soccer, football, horseshoes, field basketball, "grab the bacon", checkers, dominoes, "puncho" and a mardine ball relay. Stunts include "pick up coin", "elbow balance", "chair life", "jump and teach", "ankle somersault", "chair creeper", "crane dive", "jump stick", "skin the cat", "Indian leg wrestle", "frog fight", "wheel barrow race" and "strait jacket marathons".

Field and track activities include the 100-yard dash, 75-yard dash; relay running race, mawake relay race, standing broad jump, running broad jump, high jump, shot put, Paul Rogers race, antelope race, one-legged race and tug o' war.

McKinley park has one full-time supervisor and there are two each at Lincoln and the Shovel Co. grounds. Supervisors are from the WPA rolls and the assistants which each has are furnished by the N.Y.A. and work 23 hours every two weeks.

Every Friday night from 7 to 8:30 the leaders and assistants meet with Clarence Lenz, boys' work secretary for the Y, and have a staff meeting and training session. They go over the daily program for the coming week, receive instructions as to the handicraft that is to be pursued, learn the games and stunts scheduled for the five-day period, and hold a general pep session.

Mr. Lenz is in charge of the playground activities and every day he makes morning and afternoon visits to each playground, seeing that the program is moving along and bringing any supplies which may be needed.

Program Is Free
The playgrounds are free to any boy or girl who wishes to enjoy them. Every piece of equipment either in the property of the city parks or is furnished from the fund raised by the playground "tag day" sale in the spring. The only things the boys and girls have furnished as far as the clearances for some of the wood projects, and paper plates for the hot pad racks.

Mrs. Ruth Blair is the supervisor at the McKinley playground and her assistants are Miss Mary Murray, Miss Mildred Hanby, Miss Margaret Dyer, Woodrow Hartley, LeRoy Emery, Robert Williamson and William McCay. William Woeener, supervisor, and Donald Camer, leader, at the Lincoln playground, are assisted by Miss Corollia Hase, Miss Elaine Harter, Miss Christine Ralston, Miss Tolla Shrock, Miss Nellie Blair and Harold Grant at the Shovel Co. grounds. Miss Caprice, a supervisor, Miss Martin, a supervisor, leader, and Miss Helen Sturgeon, Miss Juanita White, Miss Elizabeth Fox, Miss Ella Holycross, Harold Bull, Joe Stafford and Victor Augenhough are assistants.

PLANS FOR GRANGE PICNIC ANNOUNCED

A Grange picnic Aug. 26 at Garfield park was announced at a meeting of Marion Grange Tuesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Douer, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dillaver, Mr. and Mrs. William Rush and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Guntner were appointed a committee to arrange for a display at the county fair. Harley Leon, a former resident of the community who is now living in Arkansas, gave an interesting account of cotton raising in the west. The program included vocal selections by Fred Haldinger and Mel Campbell.

Your Health

BY DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dim Light.
SUFFERERS FROM night blindness, a condition much the same as moon blindness in horses, have difficulty seeing at night approaches. There is a definite disturbance of the normal sight, caused by changes in the retina of the eye. For years little was known about it, and, as a rule, it was disregarded.

According to recent investigations, it is sometimes caused by a deficiency of vitamin A in the diet. As our knowledge of vitamins increases, we are able more thoroughly to understand many heretofore confusing and unpleasantly complicated disorders of the human machine.

It is necessary that this disorder be recognized, because it plays an important role in traffic problems. According to a recent survey of the National Safety Council, traffic accidents reach their peak at dusk and when darkness falls. This increase is noted in spite of the fact that traffic decreases at this time of the day.

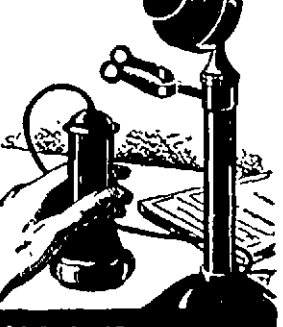

While undue fatigue is a factor, it is probable that many of these accidents can be traced to drivers who unknowingly are afflicted with night blindness. If this is the case, it would be well to check no all applicants for automobile licenses. No ordinary routine examination is available for this test, but a special instrument has been invented and can be used for this purpose.

It is known as a "photometer." If a person has difficulty in seeing when this instrument is used, it means that he has abnormally diminished vision in dim light. This indicates that there is a definite impairment in his ability to see when the light is dim.

Recent experiments appear to prove that the victim may improve his vision by taking a diet rich in vitamin A. This vitamin may be given in the form of concentrated foods, one of which is "carotene."

CHIEF WHITE-EYES

The last Indian blooded in the conflict between the whites and Indians in northeastern Ohio is believed to have been that of White-Eyes, a noted chief, in 1788.

One day when slightly intoxicated the old chief attacked a youth of 17. The young man ran, but seeing that he was being outrun, and that the chief had an upturned tomahawk, he stopped, turned, and fatally shot the Indian.

Settlers feared that it would result in an outbreak by the Indians. To reassure the Indians the young man was arrested, taken to Steubenville, tried and acquitted under territorial laws. The trial cooled hot blood, a number of gifts were given to influential Indians, including the wife of the dead chief, and nothing more came of it.

The Changsha-Chungking highway in China, 243 kilometers long, connecting the principal producing center of Hunan province with Seichuan province, Yangtze river port, has been opened to traffic.

which is rich in this needed substance. According to recent reports, many of the sufferers from night blindness are completely cured in a matter of about two weeks. This is pretty hard to believe, but it is surely worthwhile to try.

The importance of vitamin A in the diet cannot be overstated. It is related to the health of the eyes and should be included in the daily diet of all infants and children, as well as adults. It aids in the prevention of various disorders of the eyes.

EX-DEAN FREED IN ATTACK CASE

England Jury Acquits Educator After Six Hours of Deliberation.

By The Associated Press

Elder was acquitted of a charge of simple assault on Norton. The Franklin county jury, which heard testimony for nearly a week, returned its verdict at 9:45 p. m.

Alli Is Offered
The commonwealth had charged Elder with assault on Norton, former school cashier, to Norton's Greenfield garage on the night of last May 23. Norton testified Elder had pointed a gun at him—but Elder in testimony denied he was in Greenfield that night.

Elder told the jury he was at Keene, N. H., 10 miles away, and his wife corroborated his story in her testimony.

Both Deny Charge
Witnesses testified that Norton, six years ago, accused Elder of "kissing and embracing" his stenographer, Miss Evelyn Dill, but both Elder and Miss Dill denied that Elder ever had kissed or embraced her.

Elder and Norton were associates of Dr. Elliott Spear, headmaster of Mt. Hermon School, who was shot and killed nearly three years ago. His slayer never has been identified.

BETTE DAVIS IS SUN STRUCK

Under Constant Care of Doctor; Will Require Month of Rest.

By International News Service
HOLLYWOOD, Calif., July 28—Blond Bette Davis, motion picture star, today was seriously ill as a result of a severe sunstroke.

In a darkened room at her Carpienteria beach home, the actress was under the constant care of a physician.

It will be at least a month before she will be able to resume film work, the doctor said.

Disclosure of the painful plight of the dainty, blue-eyed star was made by her husband, Harmon O. Nelson.

Nelson hurried to Hollywood to report Miss Davis' illness to Jack L. Warner, productions head of Warner Brothers studio. Said he: "Expecting to pass a brief vacation at the beach, Bette took advantage of the warm weather to relax by sunbathing. She passed Monday and Tuesday on the beach. Late Tuesday afternoon she became ill. We called her physician and immediately he diagnosed her ailment—the symptoms of which are similar to those of apoplexy—an aneurism.

"He said a full month of rest and treatment will be necessary."

Letters From Our Readers

Editor of The Star: The editorial on "Bacon Regulation" in yesterday's issue of The Star incites the commendation of all who appreciate leadership which seeks to preserve decency in the community, and to conserve the welfare of the youth and homes of the city. And it serves notice to the unscrupulous managers of present-day saloons and their associated vice that they are on the way out once more due to their complete disregard of human values and community well-being.

I thank you personally for this editorial, and wish to assure you that Calvary church is in hearty accord with the sentiments it expresses.

WPA-MADE MOVIE TO BE SHOWN HERE

"Second Wind" Will Be Screened Friday Night at Y. M. C. A.

Clark Foster of Columbus, field supervisor for WPA adult education program, will lecture as the film is shown. A feature of the program will be technical motion pictures taken by George Schertz of Marion who received his training in the Marion WPA photography class.

"Second Wind" was produced under the direction of Rev. H. Lee Jones, now student pastor of the University of Kansas, by the Montgomery County Adult Teachers' association, an organization of adult and nursery school teachers employed on the WPA education program at Dayton. Its purpose is to bring to the general public in pleasurable pictorial form the important types of education carried on in adult classes and in nursery schools by CWA, FEPA and WPA since December of 1933.

The original purposes of the emergency schools were to provide employment for qualified, unemployed teachers, and to provide opportunities for millions of unemployed persons to use their enforced leisure time more profitably, either in preparing for a new job or keeping minds and hands occupied until employment came.

The nursery school program included additional purposes in providing a more wholesome environment for a portion of each day for children of relief or underprivileged families and to provide parent education for the parents of the children.

The story running through the film shows how, through the emergency school program, a typical white family and a typical colored family were aided mentally, spiritually and physically in bridging the deepest part of the depression. Numerous shots show a variety of adult classes for white, foreign-born and colored and nursery schools for white and colored children in action.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

BY HOWARD BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor
NEW YORK—Something Columbus overlooked in 1492 or shortly thereafter has been rediscovered in 1937 in the making of metal.

It is the principle of making an alloy when there isn't heat enough to melt one of the metals. The principle was used this year to make tungsten alloy without melting the tungsten.

Melting large pieces of tungsten is economically impossible. But tungsten powder, mixed with copper and nickel powder heated to the point where the copper and nickel get sticky makes an alloy.

Before Columbus, the Indians of the Emeraldas coast, South America, heated platinum and gold until the gold melted. They hammered the two together. Repeated heatings and hammerings produced a platinum alloy so perfect that even a metallurgist, on superficial examination, would take it for ordinary platinum.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND BY HELEN ROWLAND

Better an evening at home with a lively book than a stalled ox and champagne at a night club with a deadly bore.

There are lots of things that a pretty girl can do to wreck her looks and kill her charms besides skinning her hair back of her ears and wearing a dunce-cap for a hat—but none funnier or more effective.

To be attractive makes a girl talked about. But if she can just get herself talked about, she doesn't need to be attractive. The men will come around anyway.

In her teens, a woman looks forward to love; in her twenties, she expects it; in her thirties, she strives to inspire it and, after forty, she cynically opens her purse-strings and prepares to buy a good imitation.

The rules of the love-game were once as clear and definite as the rules of bridge. But nowadays a girl has to play it by intuition—and with her fingers crossed.

Girls still continue to read all the advice on how to choose a husband, even though the "choice" is an average woman's life is about as limited as that in a table d'hôte menu.

So susceptible is the average woman, that she should stick to a perfectly useless husband forever if he would just refrain from saying "How fat you are!" and keep on saying "How cute you are!"

In some places, a man can drink only when sitting down—in others only when standing up. But to the woman who's waiting for him to come home to dinner, it doesn't make the slightest difference whether he does it sitting down or balancing on his head.

Traffic rule for love: Never try to head off a man who is determined to get past you. Give him the road—and save yourself from a big folt and a lot of dents in your vanity.

Coincidence.

It was merely a coincidence that The Star began publication of a series of traffic safety cartoons on a day when several columns of the paper were filled with accounts of accidents in this vicinity. The toll listed on that particular day consisted of seven dead and eleven injured.

Just a coincidence, but nevertheless significant and something that tragically demonstrates the extreme need of constant caution and care while motoring.

Persons who have travelled extensively in motor cars have been heard to remark that this locality is one of the most dangerous traffic spots they have come across. That may be an exaggeration, and we hope it is. In all probability driving in this part of the country is about the same as in other places where roads are good, automobiles numerous and where there is a proportionate large amount of traffic. That, however, is not saying that traffic is as safe as it should be here. Instead, it means that it is as hazardous as the general average and consequently needs improvement. For the general average takes entirely too many lives, cripples too many people and causes too much property damage.

That is why the National Safety Council is carrying on an unending campaign to have drivers keep their mental faculties clear and alert while at the wheel. That is why The Star gladly cooperates with the council in its work and is publishing the series of cartoons in hope of conveying useful messages to motorists.

Actually there should be no need of repeated warnings and instructions to automobile drivers. Few there are who do not know how to drive safely and sanely. The difficult task is to have them use that knowledge while they are driving. So the hope is that by keeping safety appeals constantly before them, through newspapers, movies, highway signs and other agencies, the importance of caution and observance of all traffic rules will gradually become uppermost in their minds. When that state of mind is prevalent among automobile drivers, headlines listing traffic casualties in horrifying figures will be a thing of the past.

Mighty Little Men.

Japan in its whole empire has less than 100,000,000 souls. China, as nearly as can be estimated, contains something more than 400,000,000.

Yet, it was not considered foolish when Japan undertook to seize Chinese territory, because China is poorly organized. Millions of its inhabitants have no contact with anything in the world but the land, their families and their neighbors. They are useless as patriots.

Men have dreamed of the potential power of an awakened, organized China, but their dreams vanished in the heat of reality. Plainly, there was nothing to prevent Japan's mighty little men from doing as they pleased with the sleeping giant—unless he awakened.

These things are recalled by dispatches relating the gravity with which Japan is dealing with the Peking crisis. Three million army reservists have been ordered to stand ready. Japanese militarists admit they are dealing with a kind of Chinese resistance they never encountered before. The giant is stirring. The good little men who fight for the Emperor of the Sun are meeting, at last, some good big men fighting for the land of their ancestors.

Party Splits.

Insurrection within the President's own political party has plenty of precedent in American politics. From the days when Andrew Jackson's followers left him, crying that his policies were making him a "king," presidents at intervals have faced revolt and in every important case the party has lost prestige which was not regained for many years.

Slavery and secession split the Democrats on the eve of the Civil war and contributed to the election of Abraham Lincoln. President McKinley was elected easily when Grover Cleveland split with his party on questions of tariff and a gold plank. Woodrow Wilson, encouraged by a "mandate" from his people, fought for the League of Nations and so disrupted his party that in the "great and solemn referendum" of 1920 the Democrats lost even Tennessee and Oklahoma.

A year ago President Roosevelt was riding on the crest of a tidal wave of political popularity which carried him to one of the most decisive victories in American politics but precedents show that the downfall of a political leader starts with dis-

New Presidential Tactics

WASHINGTON, July 29.—President Roosevelt has started up a good deal of suspicion, perhaps unjustified, by his request that the attorney general advise him by formal opinion whether a recess appointment to the supreme court would be legal.

The mere fact that the opinion was asked has led to the widespread belief that Mr. Roosevelt planned to wait till after Congress adjourns and then name a justice who would sit in the October term of the court and perhaps longer, depending on whether the new justice were confirmed at the session of Congress beginning next January.

One view taken has been that by this method Mr. Roosevelt would make it embarrassing for the senate to reject his nominee, since the appointee would be wearing the robes of the court and participating in the hearings and decisions. To disqualify a justice who has once sat on the bench—though this has happened once—might raise the question of the validity of the decisions rendered while he was sitting on the court.

The legal questions involved would seem to be easy to clear up by a simple reference to the Constitution itself, which says: "The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next session."

The language is plain that the President does not make recess appointments except during the recess of the senate. When Justice Van Devanter retired recently, the senate was not in recess. The vacancy occurred while the senate was in session. Mr. Roosevelt has the power, moreover, to convene a special session of the senate at any time before next October when the supreme court term begins, and even if there is a slight delay in October, the court may continue to function with eight members inasmuch as six is a quorum under existing law.

Leading the judiciary act of 1869, which is the present law fixing the size of the supreme court, the following language will be found:

"The supreme court of the United States shall consist of a chief justice of the United States and eight associate justices, any six of whom shall constitute a quorum." The two dozen justices of the court are divided into nine justices, but definitely even the number shall be nine. Likewise, the Constitution itself uses mandatory language with reference to nominations to the supreme court. It says:

Modern Noah's Ark

SHOULD New York have an animal Ellis Island? The New York Times expressed the possibility that it might be needed if arriving ships continue to disgorge wholesale cargoes of the denizens of Africa and Malayan jungles. Says the Times:

"Here are some of the animals which are about to arrive: giraffes, Thomson gazelles, dik diks, Greys' zebras, cheetahs, war hogs, rhinos, giant rats, egg-eating snakes, jackals, genets, ant bears, baby rhinoceros and 500 tropical birds."

Here again, are some which actually arrived — on board the S. S. Clingwood Prince: 10 pythons 20 to 26 feet in length each, six smaller pythons, 31 Celebes monkeys, five gibbons, two leopards, great numbers of giraffes, some crocodiles, a pair of orang-outangs, three Malayan bears, 20 small snakes, and some crows.

The orang-outangs are said by H. Dworkin, shipping broker, to be "the largest and fiercest ever brought here."

The larger shipment is on its way (subsequently arriving) from Africa on board the Atlantic of the American-South African Line.

Some of the birds, on a matter of fact, may not be allowed to enter the country, according to Captain Ronald Cheyne Scott, director of the zoo. There are also some animals in the lot listed as "mongrel." These are undesirable animals, the captain added, and will be deported or destroyed.

However, most of the beasts are natural of a welcome, Captain Scott went on. The zoo can keep many for itself and sell enough of the others, he believes, to pay most of the expense. With the zebras, the situation is actually reversed. They don't want the "horror in prison strips" over in Kenya Colony, because they are as unmanageable as any American bison and the United States is doing the British colony a favor by taking them.

The African shipment was described by Captain Scott as "probably the largest ever brought from Africa." He said this fact came as a considerable surprise to him, since Benjamin and Raymond Lepow, the Kenya Colony government and the shipping line had originally promised to get him "an animal or two" for the Central Park and Prospect Park Zoos. As it is, the collection may be worth $70,000, he said, and the cost of bringing it here is $21,000.

The Malayan shipment which arrived on the Clingwood Prince had one exciting incident on the voyage according to Mr. Dworkin, when a huge python got loose and chased a monkey, which had escaped simultaneously, through the rigging.

Henry Danck, the trader who rounded up the beasts in the Far East, pursued both and succeeded in returning them to captivity.

Insurrection inside his own party and there is increasing indication that this kind of internal warfare is growing within the party of President Roosevelt.

Come In, Mr. Burglar.

Mrs. Charles Caulfield of East Orange, N. J., attached a disk bearing her name and address to a string of keys in the hope that if they were lost the finder would return them. They were lost and the finder returned them—when the family was away from home—and used them to enter the house and burglarize it.

The incident is reported in the hope that it will hurt the burglary business.

Identification on keys is an invitation to the crook to use them. It is much better to be put to the expense of a new set than to have the house looted in recovering the old ones.

HARD TO MISS.

Only five out of a college class in the west could name correctly the seven hills of Rome, but maybe they could have guessed right on the biggest bluff over there.—Boston Herald.

GETTING AT THE MEAT OF IT.

A sky-ramp building campaign for Hamburg, Germany, encountered opposition on account of cost. Hamburgers believe there's too much at steak.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

"He (the President) . . . shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint . . . judges of the supreme court."

This clearly means that the appointing power—the President—must cooperate with the confirming power—the senate—to fill vacancies in the supreme court. To fail to make a nomination now while the senate is in session would be to refuse to permit the normal constitutional process to operate and would be a neglect of public duty.

The custom heretofore has been that, when a nomination failed of confirmation at the end of a session of Congress, a recess appointment would be given, but would last, of course, only till Congress had a reasonable chance to act, and if the nomination remained unacted upon, it would be withdrawn. This, however, relates to inferior officers of the government. At no time has a vacancy in the supreme court which happened during the time Congress was in session failed to result in a nomination to fill such vacancy. The only recess appointment to a supreme court position appears to have occurred in June, 1925, after Congress had adjourned the previous March. Justice Rutledge was given a recess appointment by President Washington. Subsequently, when Congress reconvened, the nomination of Justice Rutledge, who had joined in the work of the court, was rejected by the senate.

The senate has acted unfavorably, that is, has refused to confirm or has postponed consideration or has used nomination to be withdrawn in 22 cases. This is about one-fifth of all the justices who have sat on the highest bench. Confirmation usually takes time, rarely less than 10 days and often more than 20 days. If Mr. Roosevelt doesn't want to prolong the present session of the senate, he can call an extra session for mid-September, as the supreme court does not meet till the first Monday in October.

The President in his fireside chat on March 8 last said that he was eager to appoint new justices "now" and he emphasized the word "now." It seems probable, therefore, that there will be nine justices on the bench next autumn and the only question really is whether Mr. Roosevelt will attempt a recess appointment and bring on a controversy which really would be avoided if he sent in a regular appointment to the senate instead of a recess appointment.

Three men are believed to be in the lead in the President's consideration of a prospective appointment. They are Stanley Reed, former solicitor general; Judge San Hutton of New Mexico, a former United States senator and at present on the circuit court of appeals for the tenth circuit which sits in Denver and the southwest; and Judge Joseph C. Hutcheson Jr., of the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit which sits in New Orleans and the south. Mr. Hutton has been on the federal bench since June, 1933, when President Roosevelt appointed him. Mr. Hutcheson has served since 1918, when President Wilson appointed him. He is 58 years old.

There would probably be very little delay in the confirmation of any of these three. Mr. Reed was slated for the bench when he was made solicitor general and a familiar with the work of the supreme court. Mr. Hutton is popular with the members of the senate. Mr. Hutcheson is regarded as a judge of the Brandeis type and with an excellent record among members of the bar in his section of the country.

Demons Lurk

IT IS hard sometimes to understand Nazi philosophy, and the difficulty probably is explained by the fact that those trying to comprehend it are attempting to make it fit ideas with which they are familiar.

In the following paragraph, the complete dissimilarity of thought between the masters of the third reich and free citizens of the United States is sharply illustrated. The speaker is Bernhard Rust, education minister of Germany. The occasion is the bicentennial of Goettingen university. It was to protest against Dr. Rust, who utilized a similar occasion at Heidelberg university last year to insult them, that many of the members of the Goettingen university objective trust refused to send representatives to the Goettingen celebration. This was Dr. Rust's fourth address in three days, and he was scheduled to deliver two more the next day, indicating his indifference to the feelings of the scholars who attended the celebration.

"Those nations that prize personal liberty as their most valuable possession," said Dr. Rust, "must today recognize the end of it. Just as and always will be the most agonizing form of dictatorship, a dictatorship of the masses. In the end it knows the destruction of national states. Those nations will pay for this liberty with their own existence. They will come under the dictatorship of the Jewish race of world wanderers who know no fatherland."

"These democracies who come here and shake their heads because we march so much need to be told something: They will reap from their democratic idea of liberty the destruction of their liberty. At the end of their road is not order but chaos."

Addressing the students Dr. Rust said, according to the New York Times report of his speech: "The word that expresses abroad the problem of the attitude to be taken toward Germany is 'liberty.' The world does not deny that Germany has changed for the better, but asserts she has paid too high a price, that in Germany the noblest thing for which men can live—liberty—is lacking."

"This word 'freedom' is particularly a problem for us here at this time. It is used in the sense of academic freedom, liberty for the academic citizen and the student and freedom for the university and for science."

"Believe me, my young comrades, behind that word 'freedom' demons lurk. We have the most tragic example, in the history of Athens. You are all more or less acquainted with the famous address of Pericles after the first year of the Peloponnesian war. He asserted that the Athenians, although they enjoyed personal liberty, had shown themselves on the battlefield to be equals of the Spartans. Yet at the end of that war Athens was defeated and on the road to ruin."

Ill Wind for New Deal

BY WALTER LIPPMANN

NEW YORK, July 29.—In the past few days there have been two attacks in the wind which presage even more serious trouble for the new deal than it has as yet encountered. Last week Senator Gerald N. Nye of North Dakota, attacked the national labor relations board as a kangaroo court biased in favor of the CIO, and said it would be better to abolish the board than to let it make "economic hash of our national welfare." And on Monday Representative Rankin of Mississippi, denounced the board as "conspiring with communistic influences to destroy southern industries."

What makes these attacks so significant is, of course, the fact that Senator Nye and Representative Rankin belong to the left wing of what used to be called the farm bloc. Both of them are the avowed and persistent enemies of eastern bankers and of the public utilities; both are in the traditional American sense advanced progressives; that is in any, on the basis of concentrated wealth, big business and the conservative direction of money and credit. Yet here they are, sharply challenging the new deal on one of its crucial policies; on its attempt to use the federal power to create a labor movement based on industrial unionism in alliance with the new deal democracy.

Any objective student of American politics could have told Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Wagner, "The Nation" and "The New Republic," Mr. Heywood Brown and other notable philanthropists with the notion of a farmer-labor party, that just this was bound to happen. The amateur progressives who have been riding high, wide and handsome for the last two or three years have been determined to be the last to see the light. I find that the logical objective of their efforts was a political party combining class-conscious farmers with class-conscious industrial workers. It is sheer delusion but being possessed by this delusion they have been unable to think straight, and have proceeded to make one gigantic blunder after another.

The plain fact of the matter is that when farmers go into politics they naturally seek to raise the cost of living and to make raw materials more expensive; and when labor goes into politics it naturally does things which make more costly the things which the farmer buys. The idea that the same government can at one and the same time raise farm prices artificially and raise wages artificially would never be entertained by any competent student of politics.

For it is a truth, demonstrated again and again in our experience, verifiable from the experience of every other country, including Russia, easily confirmed by any one who has lived both in industrial cities and in rural areas, that the divergence of interest and of moral outlook is very great between the city and the country. To think of founding a political party on their common interests is naive; for the real problem is to discover how statesmanship is to adjust and conciliate their conflicts of interest.

But because the dominant new dealers are under the hallucination that they are creating a farmer-labor party, they have renounced the effort, difficult enough in all conscience, to play the part of the firm, friendly but impartial judge of conflicting interests. It has been a tragic blunder. It may do credit not only to them but the cause of progressivism that they lead so earnestly but so unwisely. These attacks from Messrs. Nye and Rankin are certain signs that in becoming the partisans of the CIO the new dealers have not only not advanced a farmer-labor party, but have, in fact, driven a wedge between the agrarian pro-

An Index to Public Sentiment

BY O. O. MINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 29.—The news reels, more than any other barometer, show how the winds are blowing for People Who Matter. In the neighborhood houses as well as those patronized by a more ultra audience on Madison avenue there seems no restraint in giving the cheer or the hiss.

Here the public may see and hear how the populace grows hot and cold for their idols. Not many retain high favor long. Once there were only groans for Chief Justice Hughes but today the groans are drowned by the hurrahs. Hitler and Mussolini get mixed ovations. Mostly jeers.

Al Smith, for a time hoisted, has come back into favor and is received as warmly as ever he was before he threatened to take his famous stroll. For a time there was only silence for Jimmy Walker but then they roared and are applauding him again with fervor. Young LaFollette is given the raspberry.

John L. Lewis comes in for a 70-30 reception, 70 hoots and 30 huzzahs. The President, before and after his reelection, received only enthusiastic salutes. But today in certain localities they are not so respectful. There are many who resort to the boo.

The Algonquin has the oldest bartender in the town. Past 70, he has been mixing drinks for more than 50 years. He was at the old Metropole at Prince and Broadway during the 1888 blizzard.

and for a long time mixed toddies for the sports at Niblo's Garden. But his years make him look a little out of focus in the surrounding picture of collegiate bartenders today. Most of them are in their 20s, bright-looking boys who know all the answers but from what we hear know very little about fashioning the flizes.

The Mickey Finn, long an notoriety for the barroom pest, still has a few able practitioners. But he is rarely used in the bars. The night clubs employ it when the bouncers' requests for quiet fail. It is an innocuous tasting drink containing an emetic that makes the drinker suddenly bolt for the wash room—and in most instances he is too weak to want to play any more. In fact, so weak he usually has to be trundled to a taxi.

The most caustic ribbing organization in New York is the Circus Salinis and Sinners club, a goofy organization started by Dexter Fel-lows, circus press agent. Now and then they hold a dinner and initiate a new member—someone of the headline importance. And they "take it" he had better stay away from it. The victim of every indignity with the possible exception of madness. All the pomp he ever had is deflated and if he tries back talk he will be hushed with a skunk of custard pie smack in the kisser. They give such dinners in the ball rooms of large hotels where there is plenty of room to do their stuff.

There was a touch of neighborhood sentiment in the recent tribute to "Tech" Hannan, who has been the kindly keeper of Gramercy's put it "cultivating the children and the flowers." The neighbors backed up verbal appreciation and Dr. John H. Finley, editor of the New York Times, who resides in Gramercy, made a speech in which he lamented Hannan hadn't been superintendent of the Garden of Eden, thus saving the world much grief.

Rapallies: Louis Sobel is the only New York columnist living in Greenwich Village. . . . William the Gaxton is a push-over for necktie sales although Fred Astaire is said to have the biggest collection in the land. . . . Billy Seaman is one of the town's crack rumbustists. . . . New York's most exclusive driveway is on the C. G. K. Billings estate on upper Riverside drive, costing $250,000. . . . The late Ralph Barton's drawings now being a good price among collectors.

Niched in a crevice of fashionable Sutton Place is a gay and rather expensive cafe with tiny garden enclosed by a white-washed fence. It is called "A la Pomme Souffle" which is reminiscent of Amos Carter's crack when served potatoes soured the first time at Ciro's in Paris. Pushing them away, he cried: "I won't eat these until I know who blew them up."

Racket Smasher Still At It

Dewey Cleans Up Many "Big Shots," Is After Others.

With "Lucky" Luciano, New York vice czar, behind prison bars for a 30-50 year stretch, Special Rackets Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey opened fire on gangs preying on legitimate business. He found a city of fear. This is the fourth and last of a series of stories on "racket-washing" in New York City.

BY ROGER D. GREENE Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK, July 29.—"Lucky" guy, I'll chop out your teeth and cut your ears off!"

A blazey-eyed youth, with twinkling lips, leaned far over the railing in the office of a big New York trucking firm. The man behind the desk went white. The youth said: "I'll see," he faltered. "I'll be the best I can."

The man was Max Walsen, attorney for the firm. The youth, later identified as James Plunkett, alias Jimmy Doyle, head of a racket gang in the trucking industry.

Walsen went to Special Prosecutor Dewey's office, high in the Woolworth building, and told the story. He also brought in New Brown, slender, bespectacled young brother of the head of the trucking firm.

Still bandaged, Brown described a beating he had suffered at the hands of seven pugilists in connection with the shakedown racket.

Gang Attack "I was in the back of the garage changing my clothes. Each one of these seven guys grabbed up something when they came in. One of them, another a chair. They took tools off the rack. They rushed me all together."

They hit me with everything at once—ax, chair, fist, knee. I took me 15 or 20 minutes to get out the floor after they'd left."

Dewey nodded. It was not a new story. It was the same in the fields of legitimate enterprise—transportation, poultry, bakery, electrical contracting, garment and other industries.

"One of my assistants will take an affidavit from you," he told the victims. "Don't let anyone know you have been to see me. We will quickly. That's all."

From his desk drawer, Dewey took a newspaper clipping. It read: "Rackets in New York City. A Policy man, $100,000,000 a year. Loan sharks, $20,000,000. Prostitution, $12,000,000. Contracting, $10,000,000. Fur industry, $10,000,000. Bakery racket, no estimate. Garment industry, $3,000,000. Second-hand bricks, $3,000,000. Restaurant racket, $2,000,000. Poultry racket, no estimate. Trucking, $1,000,000. $1,000,000. Total, $500,000,000 a year."

It wasn't official. It wasn't complete. But it showed at least part of a staggering "slice" of organized crime in New York City to draw on.

Lionel in Drama On Broadway, the hit show "Behind Red Lights" portrayed Dewey.

BY MARIE DE NEVILL

There were many who were within the room and he was being made the victim of varying passions and desires.

Sam Cutter was determined to have a conviction to his credit before election. Josh Hastings wanted Ted out of his path. And Tom Runyon, Ted suspected, wanted to gain credit in Kay's eyes by helping to convict him.

Ted watched inwardly as he remembered Tom Runyon's testimony yesterday. He had described finding Kay on the trail and how she had told him about Ted and Marion. He had carefully left out any word of her real condition and her delirium. Ted had heard

"What a dream where he had been!" Ted thought. "Where was he? Johnson found?"

"Where were you dropped?" Ted asked.

"That's a surprise, now!" Ted winked at one of his men who guffawed in appreciation of the sheriff's sarcasm. "Come on, we ain't asking you to investigate."

"You're going to cut off the red spring?" Ted asked.

"But there was a question he had to know," Ted said to the man following

"Did you find me?" And Ted thought that both parties were at the same time.

The gun Kay had given him had been exhibited, and the bullet that had killed Scrap Johnson had been indisputably proved to have come from that gun.

They had also produced as witnesses the men who had been in Kelly's place the time Ted had fought with Scrap Johnson, and they testified, one after the other, that Ted had threatened to kill Scrap if he ever heard him mention a certain girl again.

Kay springs a surprise at the trial, tomorrow.

Marriage Meddlers

BY ADELE GARRISON

Harry Fears More Trouble Is Brewing for Party.

A LAUREL WREATH for Madame MacLavelle! Lillian said when I had finished outlining my plan for our treatment of the dancing interlude with the orchestra men which our girls had just concluded. But she said it softly, for the four young people were just coming into earshot.

The boys palpably had already forgotten the episode which had humiliated them. Both Marion and Carolyn, with intuitive feminine skill, had evidently been at work "repeating their fences" and the results were tangible.

The girls were as jaunty as ever, but Carolyn had a hint of defiance in her manner, and I saw that both girls were furiously watching us. That they feared our displeasure, and were prepared to react if, in plain, I hastened to forestall any possible word on their part which would bring into the open an issue which we were trying to evade.

"We're all waiting to congratulate you girls," I said smoothly. "We're so proud of you. That was a most disagreeable situation into which those men forced you out there, and you managed it beautifully."

They turned astonished faces toward me, their jaws actually dropping a little. Harry Underwood, who caught up the cue, said:

"And the way you beat them at their own game was the best thing I've seen in a month of Sundays," he said. "We all saw them trying to make you falter when you were following those fool tricks steps of theirs, but neither of you failed once."

"They weren't so hot, those steps," Carolyn said, rallying and preparing to accept this unexpected turn of things. "After you've danced with West Point and New Haven men a lot, nothing those men could spring would phase you."

"Bill and Hank have some steps tonight that had their backs off the boards," Marion put in hastily, and I blessed her for the kindly thoughtfulness as I saw the sensitive faces of the two boys flush with pleasure.

"I'm so thankful none of our friends was here," Lillian said. "I think we'd be criticized severely, Harry, for letting the girls in for anything as cheap as those strange cutting in and dragging them through those fool steps that were amateurish and tiresome. I don't see what your mother's going to say to me, Carolyn."

Anything more artful than the delicate disdain in her manner I could not imagine. I could fairly see it shining into the consciousness of both girls. And knew that their sense of values, temporarily jolted out of place, was being rapidly restored. But Carolyn, as always, masked her true feeling with pertness.

"Why tell her?" she said. "She'd only be worried for nothing. This probably won't ever happen again. The next orchestra men who play for us probably won't know we're on earth."

"Heaven grant the boon!" I said fervently to myself, but I allowed no hint of my feeling to escape me.

"I'm not in the habit of hiding my eyes," Lillian said. There was just the right infusion of lightness in the tact rebuke to rob it of sting. "It's lots more comfortable to confess 'em and receive absolution."

"Well, you're not going to get absolution from anybody," her husband growled realistically. "If you don't stop peacocking and let us get busy with this second course."

The hovering waiter had seen to it that our food, piping hot, was placed upon the table as soon as the young people had come back from the dance floor. We discussed it leisurely, the girls patiently glad to rest for a bit, the boys, delighted, as always, with the opportunity for "good eats."

Sees New Peril.

As I listened to their chatter, which included lively plans for fishing parties, hikes and trips to nearby scenic beauties, I relaxed and revelled in the success of our plan to give the boys the company of the two girls for a few days. I was thankful, too, that the episode of the orchestra men had resulted in no unpleasantness, and that the girls, I believed, had learned a useful lesson.

But I was rudely jolted back to reality when, after the four young people had gone back to the dance floor, Harry Underwood, who had been intently looking at a table of men in the corner of the room diagonally opposite to ours, said abruptly:

"I'm afraid we're not out of the woods, yet."
